BIOGRAPHY

Keith T. Campbell focuses his practice on education matters with a particular emphasis on special education. Keith provides counsel for school districts as they navigate the complex procedural steps surrounding Individualized Education Programs for their students. He assists with regulatory compliance, IEP meetings, mediations, HIB investigations and appeals, and other administrative and legal proceedings associated with this multifaceted area of the law.

Keith also has experience representing board of education clients in a variety of other areas including student matters, complaint investigations, and general education policy and administration. He has also assisted board clients with employment matters including sexual harassment investigations. As a certified teacher with twelve years of experience teaching high school history, Keith provides a unique, practical perspective for his clients.

Keith is noted for his clear and prompt communication and prides himself in providing timely, accurate counsel in response to client requests.

While attending Rutgers Law School, Keith served as student counsel to low-income children in the Special Education Clinic and to small business entrepreneurs in the Intellectual Property Clinic. He was also as a judicial intern in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Criminal Division in Somerset County.
